Presents

Civil Society in Egypt: The Human Rights Component

Dr. Saad Eddin Ibrahim and Dr. Barbara Ibrahim

Dr. Saad Eddin Ibrahim is Professor of Sociology at the American University in Cairo and founder of the Ibn Khaldun Center for Development Studies. Internationally known and respected scholar of political, social, and economic development in the Arabic-speaking world, Dr. Ibrahim has published widely in English and Arabic on the subjects of democracy, Islam, civil society, and citizenship and won numerous awards. His arrest by the Egyptian government in 2000 and subsequent conviction and imprisonment captured the attention of international human rights organizations and heads of state.

Dr. Barbara Ibrahim is Regional Director for West Asia and North Africa at the Population Council in Cairo. She is internationally recognized as a leading scholar on gender and population issues in the Arabic-speaking world. Dr. Ibrahim has written extensively on women, children and adolescents, family planning, civil society, and development. As Regional Director, she has led the Council's research program in the Arab countries of North Africa and West Asia, as well as in Pakistan, Turkey, and Iran. A mentor to young regional scholars, especially women, she is author of numerous books and articles and received the Life Time Achievement Award of the Association for Middle East Women's Studies.
